- More than half of American adults (54%) own some type of life insurance.
- In January 2021, prior to the coronavirus pandemic, 36% of Americans who didn't currently own life insurance said they intended to purchase it within the next 12 months.
- In May, more than half of Americans (53%) expressed a heightened need for life insurance because of COVID-19.
- Women are less likely to own life insurance than men. Just 47% of women own life insurance, compared with 53% of men who own life insurance.

Why do Americans own life insurance?

- The top reasons for owning life insurance are:
 - Paying for burial costs and final expenses (84%)
 - Transferring wealth across generations (66%)
 - Replacing lost wages or income (62%)
 - Supplementing retirement income (57%)
- Between 2018 and 2021, reasons for having life insurance changed—wanting burial/final expenses declined in 2021, and saving for retirement increased.

Why don't people own life insurance?

- Sixteen percent of consumers—41 million Americans—say they need life insurance coverage but don't have it.
- The top three reasons to not purchase (or to not purchase more) life insurance are:
 - They have other financial priorities (67%)
 - It is too expensive (65%)
 - They don't feel they need it (56%)
- Many also overestimate the cost of life insurance. Half (50%) of Millennials believe the estimated yearly cost for a $250,000 term life policy for a healthy 30-year-old is $1,000 or more when, in actuality, it's closer to $160 per year.
